FCAN releases Degree Attainment Profiles for all 67 Florida counties

Tampa, FL — The fastest-growing jobs in Florida require an education beyond high school, which is why Florida College Access Network (FCAN) has released new degree attainment profiles for all 67 counties in the state.

The new resource aims to help each county gain a clearer sense of where they stand on ensuring their residents have the education and training needed to meet tomorrow's workforce needs.

The profiles feature five-year degree attainment trends, average wages by education/training level, and a summary of state and county-level attainment data.

FCAN has also developed degree attainment profiles for each of the state's 12 local college access networks (LCANs). These regional networks are working collaboratively to increase college and career readiness, access, and attainment for students in their communities.

Visit FCAN's blog to access the state, county, or LCAN profile you would like to view.
